Always on the alert and willing at any time to exchange an old coat for a new idea, we have at last mastered the problem, and will begin Monday morning GIVING DOLLARS IN EXCHANGE FOR HALF DOLLARS. Our reason for this strange proceeding is as plain as the nose on a man's face, but so long as the public is not interested in the causes that have forced this action upon us the only explanation we feel inclined to furnish is that it is IMPOSSIBLE FOR US TO CONTINUE BUSINESS without a certain amount of money. To raise the required sum we will begin a radical revolution in the Clothing business by INAUGURATING a SLAUGHTER SALE that will raise the dead, dumfound competition, and paralyze the purchasing element with joy at this great feast. Values will be roasted whole, profits vanish into ashes, and prices go up in smoke. "Now is the summer of our discontent," now the critical time in our business experience, and we are determined to make this the most celebrated Slaughter Sale ever instituted under God's shining sun.

THE GRASPING SHYLOCKS THAT HOLD OUR PAPER will not allow us the customary extensions, but insist on immediate payment; we immediately appeal to the public with a liberality unprecedented in the history of the world for unbounded generosity. Monday morning every stitch of Clothing in our establishment will be on sale for one-half its former price; no reserve, no exceptions—everything goes. Coats, Pants, Vests, Coats and Vests, Suits, White Vests, Overalls, and all we have. No time to go through our stock and mark down each garment separately. Our creditors are pushing us to the wall, so we lump the entire stock and give unlimited choice for

THE TREATY WITH CHINA.

THE SENATE ADJOURNS WITH NO PROGRESS TO THE BOOM.

Democratic Consideration of the Measure Kept Upon the Republican Party and Its Candidates—The Charges Duly Refuted by Gen. Harrison's Committee—Bonds Sought for the Government to Save the Sinking Fund.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 20.—In the Senate this morning Mr. McCreary of Kentucky, from the Committee on Foreign Affairs, reported the resolution reconsidering the vote by which it passed the resolving the Senate to advise and consent to the ratification of the treaty with China, with an amendment regarding the acts of May 5, 1892, and July 5, 1894, the intent to take effect on the exchange of the ratifying treaty. Mr. McCreary said that owing to the fact that the Senate had amended the treaty it had to be returned to China for the exchange of the ratifications, and that it would probably be the first of next year before the treaty could be agreed upon. The object of the bill, he said, was to carry out the provisions of the treaty as soon as it was ratified by both nations. It totally excluded the Chinese laborers of particular treaties between the United States and China and of the laws founded thereon, in order to emphasize the necessity of the adoption of a new treaty and the passage of the pending measure.

Mr. Hoar of Massachusetts declared that the passage of the bill was necessary in order to secure the assent of the country from the people of Chinese immigration. He discussed the provisions of previous acts upon the subject and pointed out wherein they proved defective in preventing the immigration of Chinese. He found that the bill would pass a law to go into the statute books before the ratification of the treaty, in order that there should be no hiatus between the treaty and the act.

Mr. Gibson of Maryland said that every one knew Congress passed a Chinese bill as an outcome of the political campaign. The bill was passed and put upon the Chinese but a few years ago, and it was found that there were over 100,000 people in California alone in violation of obligations.

Mr. Hoar interrupted to say that the difficulties were owing to existing treaties and not to the laws.

Mr. Gibson continued that they would give to New York more proportion to the population than they would give to the Pacific coast. The House had not yet acted upon the bill, and the Senate had no right to take action upon it. The Senate had no power to originate legislation. The Constitution was explicit upon that point. The Senate could only amend or reject bills originating in the House. The Senate had not even the right to originate a bill to repeal a law. The Senate could only concur with the House in repealing a law. The Senate had no power to originate legislation. The Constitution was explicit upon that point. ATLANTA, Aug. 17.—[Special Correspondence.]—The grand Chicagoans are here, and the "Atlanta" team against the magnificent aggregation which has been playing such a fierce game of baseball with us. Atlanta is giving them a warm reception, and they are enjoying their stay in a manner which is highly gratifying to the Atlantans. The ball games have been well attended, and the visitors have received a royal welcome from the baseball lovers. Yesterday one of the games was played in this city, the other three were played in New York, where the National league season closed. The last game was a most profitable exchange as it netted to the management of several thousand dollars. The Chicagoans, as well as the Atlantans, are well pleased with the financial success of the season, and are looking forward to next year's baseball campaign with a view of adding to the interest of the game. Should the Atlanta team be successful in securing the championship pennant next year, the management will be in receipt of a handsome sum of money, and the players will be presented with gold medals.

CAPTAIN ANSON'S SKELETON.

Captain Anson, manager of the Chicago baseball team, and probably the greatest baseball player that ever lived, is to be dissected and articulated.

It occurred to him at dinner the other evening, and he has already made arrangements with the faculty of Yale college to have his body, after death, dissected and articulated. Prof. Ward, of Yale, will do the work. Anson has a fine physique, and his skeleton will be a valuable addition to the museum of the college.

Anson is getting along in years, and has accumulated a large amount of money. He has no children, and his wife is dead. He has no relatives to whom he is particularly attached, and he has decided to bequeath his body to science.

The latter is accomplished by a gentleman whose acquaintance although slight, Captain Anson is proud of. He is a professor of physiology at Yale college, and has been engaged in the dissection of the human body for a number of years. He has also been engaged in articulating skeletons, and has a number of them in his possession. He is a member of the Chicago baseball league, and is well known to Anson.

THE CHAMPION'S CAGE.

In Baltimore, where a new professional baseball club has just been started, they have a cage in which to keep the players when they are not playing ball.

It occurred to Col. Abner Dalrymple, of the Chicago baseball team, that he would like to see his old friend, Capt. Anson, of the Chicago baseball team, and he therefore went to Chicago for the purpose. He arrived in that city at noon yesterday, and at once proceeded to the baseball grounds, where he found the Chicagoans practicing. Dalrymple was recognized by Anson, and the latter immediately left the field and greeted his old friend. They then went to the hotel, where they had dinner together, and spent the afternoon in reminiscing over old times.

BOY SHOT FOR ENGERSOLL

AN OPEN, MODERN DERIVATION OF OLD HOB OR A DEMOCRAT.

One of the Is Not Quite Dead But He Needs a Proper Burial to an Unpleasantly Cadaverous Stench—He Already Will Have Had Enough Fuss to Lay Him Away Again in the Monumental Lumber—Some Mistakes of Both.

Mr. Robert G. Ingersoll, alarmed as to the maintenance of a seat in the ranks of the democracy, a seat, this excellent and patriotic gentleman has proclaimed, and to cling to which with this unyielding pertinacity which has distinguished him, and an old democrat has "stayed with him" in the party in order to afford him the benefit of his support in the present campaign.

Mr. Ingersoll has illustriously flaunted all manifestations he is aware of the kind. The average psychologist and theologist are child's play, and are quite beneath consideration in the present instance.

Now that we've settled the standard to which he is to accept that it should have and maintain in exchange for the compromise which is an outrage to the age of the world but not the public patience and a contemptuous one to the entire republican, plutocratic, to the last degree.

Mr. Ingersoll will good-naturedly excuse me from such if I point out in public print that he is a error when he says that those who do not agree with him are those who are not convinced men. The reformed man. Why, there are many, many, intemperate men, to whom I am a radio to the universe as one can come to it, too, but all of us agree with him, to be sure, but we all reformed men. Indeed, we all have been reformed that way ourselves. We remember, to the personal credit, a time present for the distinct and unequivocal and lively intemperance for many years of middle age. And if the latter is not agreed with him, there is a decided disposition to acknowledge to his own satisfaction that he is a reformed man. I myself am reformed to the extent of not agreeing with the present Democratic party, and I am reformed to the extent of not agreeing with Mr. Ingersoll. I am reformed to the extent of not agreeing with the present Democratic party, and I am reformed to the extent of not agreeing with Mr. Ingersoll. I am reformed to the extent of not agreeing with the present Democratic party, and I am reformed to the extent of not agreeing with Mr. Ingersoll.

There are, I am sorry several characters in this, and entirely unfavorable, that Mr. Ingersoll does not understand. I have only read an expression of his opinions on the subject of silver, as proved in your Sunday issue, and I am forced to conclude from the perusal that marriage is one of those things.

Mr. Ingersoll is under misconception to the article in question—"If he has read the article in question"—if he has read the article of a man's entering the lottery was not an inducement but deterrent."

Mr. Ingersoll has read it, and experience is evidently one of the things of which he has not had enough to make him a good judge. He either a farmer has experimented with the lottery or some connection. I should suppose that if he had he would have found that the chances of drawing a prize are so remote as to be practically nil. He is accused in this country of being a millionaire, and he has been accused of being a democrat. He is not a millionaire, and he is not a democrat. He is a man who has been accused of being a democrat, and he is a man who has been accused of being a millionaire. He is a man who has been accused of being a democrat, and he is a man who has been accused of being a millionaire.

Mr. Ingersoll has illustriously flaunted all manifestations he is aware of the kind. The average psychologist and theologist are child's play, and are quite beneath consideration in the present instance.

Now that we've settled the standard to which he is to accept that it should have and maintain in exchange for the compromise which is an outrage to the age of the world but not the public patience and a contemptuous one to the entire republican, plutocratic, to the last degree.

Mr. Ingersoll will good-naturedly excuse me from such if I point out in public print that he is a error when he says that those who do not agree with him are those who are not convinced men. The reformed man. Why, there are many, many, intemperate men, to whom I am a radio to the universe as one can come to it, too, but all of us agree with him, to be sure, but we all reformed men. Indeed, we all have been reformed that way ourselves. We remember, to the personal credit, a time present for the distinct and unequivocal and lively intemperance for many years of middle age. And if the latter is not agreed with him, there is a decided disposition to acknowledge to his own satisfaction that he is a reformed man. Subterranean Fatherland Used by Denizens of the Great Tenements in Various Stages of Development—One Very Mushroom Farm in Full Operation—The Suggestion Explains the Process of Cultivation and Yields a "Culture" Now Free to Users.

Almost from within sight of La Salle St., on the line of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad, a block of solid rock rises 200 or 300 feet almost straight up from the tracks. It is a picturesque spot, the narrow cañon of the cable being worn and more succeeded in perpetual grinding apparently from the centuries. There are clattering up and down the face of the cliff. But one thing more the eldest of the party does not see here and there out of the perpetually bustling sight at the foot of the cliff. Those favored with another glance perceive of the cliff and the mouth of subterranean chasm, such gateways from the bosom of the earth. The rock has been found good for making cement, and the Chicago Cement Company has its works at that very spot.

But if the workers without are amazed, to note on the persons employed for the meanings for underlying business within the cliff.

Even to the horses with the clanging machinery, whether over the cable, for a man that has or, and you will find a peculiar lighting about his face to Examiner right in the face of the cliff.

There is a fair prospect of a change now in the mind of Marine Underwriters, several members of the port having been charged with carrying risks. Private charges have not yet been made, but such complaints are to be heard by committee. The committee's report is to be brought with hearings and the port rates from 6 to 8. The penalty for the offense charged is expulsion from the port.
